

Are all bankruptcy attorneys created equal (#2)?

I'm sorry to say that yet another "impressive" bankruptcy law firm website/blog is publishing completely incorrect information. I first wrote about this phenomenon here (<http://tinyurl.com/bkattyequal2>).

The current offender published on May 4, 2012, "tax debts are not dischargeable in bankruptcy" in the lead sentence of an article about taxes.

Is this a correct statement? Absolutely not. Income tax debts are dischargeable in bankruptcy if they meet the conditions in four rules. I wrote an article about that earlier this year which you can find here (<http://tinyurl.com/backtaxesbk>).

As I closed my previous article on this subject...

What's the moral of this story? Be very careful out there when choosing a bankruptcy attorney.
